CYCLONIC CHURN TAKES TOLL

Immigrants Housed in a Newly-Built Granary Are Victims of Storm

Devastating Wind Rips Down Number of Buildings, Drives Grain Into Soil and Strips Garden Stuff—Men Literally Churned to Death Had Only Been in Neighborhood a Few Days, Having Started Work on the Strohschein Farm Less Than a Week Previously—None of the Trio Regained Consciousness, Two of Them Dying on Sunday and the Other in a Precarious Condition.

One of the worst storms in years swept over the district a few miles west of here on Friday night last, fatally injuring three Polish immigrants, as well as causing a great deal of damage to crops and farm buildings over a considerable amount of territory.

About 11 o'clock at night, according to reports, the storm that had been brewing all evening broke with all the fury that nature is capable of putting into her disturbance of the elements. The worst portion of the storm lasted about an hour. There was little damage from hail, but the driving wind and rain accompanied by sand completely stripped all the grain and garden stuff that was above ground, pounding it into the soil practically as effectively as any axe could have performed the operation.

The district that appears to have borne the brunt lies a mile west and three miles south of the St. John's Evangelical Lutheran Church on the Pigeon Lake trail. Here the cyclonic outburst cut a swath about six miles wide. In this district (from the church mentioned, into the Lone Ridge District down to the Usona P.O.) it is estimated that the crops are a total loss.

An appalling feature of the storm in these parts was the fatal injuries to three Polish immigrants, Stanislaus Franczyk, Maledj Miklowski and Wajczech Bileen, who had been cutting brush on the farm of Herman Stohschein. These men had come to Quebec from the old land, landing on the 25th of June. They came direct to Edmonton and it was on Saturday, July 3, that they took the job of cutting brush on the Stohschein farm. They were baching in a granary that was across the road and about half a mile's distance from the house. The night of the storm, one of the men had been over to the farmhouse to get a pail of milk. This was the last occasion on which any of them had spoken since. About eleven o'clock the storm broke with all its fury, awaking Herman Stohschein. At first, he says, he did not realize the danger of the situation until he discerned the "jeans" on his hand had been carried away. It was then that his thoughts were directed to the safety of the men and he decided to see how they were faring. Accompanied by the hired man he set out in the dark and rain about 12 o'clock for the granary. The lantern blew out and an attempt to relight it proved futile as their supply of matches had been water-soaked. For a short period they lost their bearings in the storm, but eventually picked up the trail to the site of the newly-built granary, but there were only an old water cask and a stone discernible on the spot. After searching for a while they located the main portion of the granary about 150 yards to the northeast of the original site and in a mass of ruins. Debris was distributed over a further distance of over a hundred yards. They found the three Poles in an unconscious condition.

Friday Proved a Decidedly Unlucky Day for Pet Pigeon

Friday last wasn't the thirteenth, but ill luck was nevertheless rampant. That date on the calendar marks the occasion of one of the worst electrical storms in the history of the city. In which the lives of at least two residents of the district were snuffed out. Preceding the outburst of rain and wind, accompanied by a brief bombardment of hail, the heavens were literally rent asunder by an unusually intensified electrical display. Little damage, however, was done in the city.

A somewhat interesting incident of the storm involves the finding of the dead body of a pet pigeon the following day by the children of Mr. Blackwell, the local shoe man. On one leg of the bird, which was of fawn and white in color, and which was an exceptionally beautiful pigeon, was a small steel band, on which was the inscription "A.J. 26 E.R.C. 13."

Mr. Blackwell has the ring in his possession. The bird met its fate on Friday; the number on the band was 13; another number, 26, is a multiple of the unlucky number; the numbers of the letters E-R-C, as they appear in the alphabet, when added together, total a similar multiple of 13. Superstition or no superstition, it was an unlucky day for somebody's pet bird.

Advertised in the paper that circulates all over the district thoroughly.

Jealousy Is Thought to Be Cause of Crime

Calgary, July 14th.—Steve Korek, a well-to-do farmer and local U. F. A. president living in the Strathmore district, first chloroformed and twice shot his sweethearts, Hazel Riesen, then shot himself, while in an automobile 11 miles east and one mile north of Crossfield Tuesday evening. The bodies were found sitting in the car as though asleep Wednesday morning about 8 o'clock.

Miss Riesen, whose family lived in the Strathmore district, was working on a farm in the neighborhood in which the double tragedy occurred.

Korek drove up there on Tuesday evening and asked the girl to go for a ride with him, saying they would be away but a few minutes. When they failed to return Tuesday night a search was made on Wednesday morning about 8 o'clock.

When the couple were found sitting in the new Chevrolet coupe of the murderer, which was parked in the centre of the road two miles from the farmhouse where Miss Riesen worked. She was

WHEAT CUTTING IS UNDER WAY IN ONTARIO FIELDS

Chatham, Ont., July 12.—Wheat cutting commenced in Kent County Monday, when several farmers of Chatham Township began to gather in the grain. Herman Klingberg, Essex district farmer, started his binder into a 40-acre field of winter wheat on Monday, and in doing so won the distinction of cutting the first winter wheat in Essex county this year.

Many Hundred Are Reported as Killed in Palestine Quake

London, July 13.—The earthquake which terrified the inhabitants of Jerusalem Sunday afternoon and wrought destruction there and in many parts of Palestine and Trans-Jordania while not on as great a scale as some similar tragedies of the Holy Land in the past, took a considerable toll of lives, and caused widespread damage.

The devastation and loss of life caused is evidently far worse than appeared from early reports.

An eye-witness who reached Cairo Tuesday estimates the loss of life at 300.

Aboriginal Chiefs Address Several Hundred Citizens From Platform in Exhibition Grounds Extolling Friendship of the White Men—Mayor Montgomery Makes Presentations—Highly Interesting Program of Sports Staged.

Last week a large number of our Indian friends to the south of us paid a visit to the city to dispense with their annual allotment of treaty money. The Indians were well received by the merchants, who welcomed them with a presentation of three splendid specimens of the bovine family.

Thursday evening the peaceful invasion of the city was brought to a fitting climax by an evening of sport, consisting of races, baseball and the annual attraction, the pow-wow, held at the Exhibition Grounds. The program, witness to a large number of the citizens, was under the able direction of Mayor Montgomery, Mr. Moan, Mr. Christopher and other business men. Following are the results of the races:

EXPECT THREE HUNDRED MILLION BUSHEL WHEAT

Ottawa, July 12.—Canada's total wheat yield for the season 1927 is forecast at 325,075,000 bushels. The estimate for the three prairie provinces is 305,062,000 bushels, and for the rest of Canada 20,023,000 bushels. Other estimates are: Oats, 389,758,000 bushels; barley, 88,830,000 bushels; rye, 12,169,000 bushels; flax, 5,319,000 bushels. The estimate is based on the condition of crops on July 30. The area to be harvested of full wheat is estimated at 71,700 acres, against 880,154 acres in 1926, a decrease of 163,054 acres, or 19 per cent.

C. P. Crop Report Highly Optimistic Throughout West

Winnipeg, July 11th.—With further rainfall in all districts of the west and moderate high temperatures, grain is coming along well says the weekly report of the department of agriculture of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

There is enough moisture now to carry the crops until the filling stage is reached, provided no extreme heat and high winds are experienced for a long period. Heat did some damage in parts of Central Saskatchewan and Western Alberta, but loss is not heavy.

Wheat is plentiful in some fields, but crop generally is in excellent condition and more promising than for some years past. Summerfalling has gone ahead rapidly, except in low spots where further rains during the week

Mutual Creamery's Cheese Winner of the Gold Medal

The Mutual Creamery Co. of Wetaskiwin, carried away premier honors in the display of cheese at the Calgary Exhibition this week, among the awards which were copped being a gold medal for the best average score in exhibits.

Mr. Wigeman was the cheesemaker who prepared the exhibit.

This was the only entry from this city, the Wetaskiwin Creamery Company not entering the competition. The results were as follows:

Class 501—Cheese, one factory

(white or colored), 70 lbs. or over: 2, Mutual Creamery Co., Wetaskiwin.

Class 502—Cheese, two factory

(white or colored), flats or stilton shape: 1, Mutual Creamery Co., Wetaskiwin.

Class 504—Best average score of exhibits in classes 501 and 502:

1, Mutual Creamery Co., Wetaskiwin.

Spirit of Goodwill
'Twixt Whites and Reds
But Intensified

The Peace Cairn was duly dedicated during the Diamond Jubilee Celebrations. The citizens of Wetaskiwin carry a considerable degree of pride in the thought that the ceremony was one most fitting to the occasion, commemorating as it did an event of 1867 as historic in the minds of the people of this district as the Confederation. But that sense or pride is not alone enjoyed by us white folks. It was most pleasing to observe the genuine interest taken in the proceedings by the several Indian chiefs and their following who were conspicuous among the throng assembled.

The presence of such a large band of our aboriginal friends during the celebration (a visit which was continued throughout the past week), has been of more than passing interest to the citizens of Wetaskiwin, and doubtless it was this feeling of brotherly interest which spurred several of our prominent citizens to stage an evening of Indian sports at the Exhibition Grounds in honor of our Indian guests. The spirit shown is to be commended in the highest degree. Our citizens greatly enjoyed themselves in going the rounds of the large camp, which gave evidences that the home life of the Indian of today enjoys orderly conduct, cleanliness and masterful supervision that is an agreeable surprise to many. And the Indians and their squaws, as well as offspring, assumed a keen delight in the fact that so many citizens took in their evening of sports. Their chiefs could not restrain themselves from telling the white people how well they think of us, and how grateful they are for the kindly thoughts which prompted the holding of the evening's program. The Indians can be no means an unimportant factor in this district, and the good feeling which has been continuously prevalent has been intensified through the incidents of the past couple of weeks.

Confederation and After;
Sixty Years of Progress
Canada's Farthest North

Few Canadians were greatly thrilled, the world at large was quite indifferent, when the Arctic Archipelago was added to the Dominion by Imperial Parliament in 1880. Yet this was the culmination of a history as thrilling as any chapter in the exploration of the unknown world. Since Frobisher in the days of Queen Elizabeth made the first bold dash into the Arctic, carrying the St. George's Cross where no flag had ever been seen before, British ships and British lives had been lavished on heroic attempts to discover the secrets of the north—partly in the hope of finding a new sea route for commerce from the Atlantic to the Pacific, but often in the purely scientific desire to complete man's knowledge of the globe he lives on.

Other nations at times had joined in the search, but none with anything like the persistent enterprise of our empire. It was equally natural, then, that the new Dominion of Canada, entrusted with the exercise of British authority over the northern half of this continent, should be given responsibility also for the islands between us and the Pole—many of them almost touching Canadian shores.

The responsibility was not light. Our new island territory covers at least 550,000 square miles—more than twice the size of France or Germany—and no part of it is easily accessible. But for many years the Federal Government has been exploring it by sea and completing the establishment of law and order where no civilized authority was known before.

Ever year a ship is sent north to patrol the islands, carrying supplies for the various Government posts, establishing new posts where advisable, and accumulating a great body of information as to the nature and resources of the land and the conditions of navigation, which vary immensely from season to season, throughout the Arctic. The yearly visit of a ship is looked forward to with great delight by the Eskimos, who are entertained on board with moving pictures and receive medical attention from the ship's doctor. The Royal Canadian Mounted Police in charge of these posts have not only completely won the confidence of the people but shown all their traditional courage and enterprise on long patrols, covering on one occasion 2,000 miles by dog-team in the dead of winter.

Last summer a new post was established on Bache Peninsula, halfway up the east coast of Ellesmere Island, and considerably north of Etah, the Danish post in northern Greenland on the opposite shore of Smith Sound; the older posts are at Craig Harbour, in the southeast corner of the same great island (it is 500 miles long); Pond Inlet and Pangnirtung on the still larger Baffin Island, where the Hudson's Bay Company also has trading stations; and Dundas Harbour on Devon Island between Ellesmere and Baffin. Each of these has a post office as well as a police station, and that on Bache Peninsula is the most northerly post office in the world. Every station has radio equipment for the reception of messages from the rest of Canada.

There is abundance of game—walrus, seal and wild fowl—even at the most northerly port; herds of musk ox are found grazing elsewhere; and coal is known to be one of the mineral resources of Franklin District—the name given to the whole archipelago in honor of the great explorer who lies in an unknown grave.

Great additions to our information as to the country and its inhabitants are expected from the representative of the Mines and Indian Departments who remained on Baffin Land when last year's expedition returned.

The Rise of Journalism

Canadian journalism has mirrored the growth of Confederation during sixty years. It has caught and reflected the disappointments, the triumphs, the tragedies and the comedies of the people of this Dominion. From day to day and from week to week the press has captured in printed words the spirit of the drama of these last six decades. The ringing phrases of yesterday no longer stir the blood of to-day's generation, but they are recorded in faintly faded print on the yellowing sheets of old newspapers carefully filed in the vaults of the nation's libraries. It is to these vaults and to these aging sheets that historians turn most frequently when trying to re-create the pictures of our country's story.

If the daily and weekly press of Confederation days was meager in news it made up for any such shortcomings by a wealth of opinion. They were sturdy courageous journals glorying in political combat. Advertising was dull and attractive and circulation was circumscribed by the transportation system of the day. But the press took quickly advantage of the mechanical improvements of the later nineteenth Century. The rapid transmission of news by telegraph, the improved presses and the cheaper newspaper paper all contributed to the expansion of the press. The direct results of good advertising and the rapid growth of Canadian railroads also contributed to development.

To-day, instead of daily papers reaching only a thousand of the people, Canada has a press that reaches to all the corners of the country. The papers are served and linked together by the Canadian Press, which is a co-operatively owned news service

As evidence of the popularity of Canadian ships, at home and abroad, the Canadian Pacific Empress of Britain sailed from New York recently on her maiden cruise of the Mediterranean booked to her cruise capacity. In all over 400 passengers were aboard for the two-months' voyage to many of the world's "high spots."

The cosmopolitan group of wanderers composed of people from every branch of activity in North America. Some were habitual globe trotters, but in the main they represented the average successful citizen, generally with the satisfaction of having achieved his life's desire—travel. Every province and state on this continent was represented.

According to recent statements made by Walter MacKenzie, managing director of the Canadian cruise line, to the four corners of the earth he has come to stay. The traveller of the hour approves of the arrangements made by experienced hands, and of going ports of the Mediterranean.

Supplying impartial accounts of current events to more than one hundred members over special wires. The larger papers supplement this service by despatches from special correspondents giving color and political interpretation to suit the paper's policy. With the emphasis in these days placed upon news rather than upon opinion the major aspects of journalism have the affairs of the world at large and despatches from all the world compete with Canadian affairs on the front page of the greatest dailies. There is, however, a recently coined phrase, a "day-to-dayness" about the press of to-day that did not exist fifty years ago.

How to Play BRIDGE

A new series of lessons by Wynne Ferguson

ARTICLE NO. 31

It is usually good practice to pass a no-trump bid when you have the lead; but there are times when a bid is justified. If you have such a strong hand that you have a good chance for game, there is no reason to pass a no-trump bid when your hand and partner bid two spades.

Again, there are hands where the defense is doubtful and a double becomes advisable to find out what partner's hand is. The following hand was not a no-trump bid, but where a bid over a no-trump on right was obligatory.

Hand No. 1

Diamonds — 10
Spades — Q, 8, 6, 3, 2

trump. His partner, B, would bid two spades with the following hand:

Hearts — 7, 6, 2
Clubs — 7, 5, 4
Diamonds — K
Spades — Q, 6, 3, 2

All would pass and A-B would score game at spades. If A passed, he would bid two spades himself. If he opened his heart suit, with the spade opening, of course, he would save game. These three hands are typical examples of when a bid over a no-trump bid over a no-trump on right was obligatory.

The following problem hands were given in the preceding article as examples of the take-out:

ish and 15.4 per cent American. Of Chinese exports Japan takes 26.1 per cent, Great Britain (including Hong Kong) 23.9, United States, 13.1.

The total number of Chinese who have embraced Christianity is not definitely known and the estimates vary from 5,000,000 to 10,000,000. The only census of Christians is for the Catholic church, which has 3,008,580 communicants, 57 bishops, 1431 priests, 1667 nuns and 1671 native priests. There are 636 protestant missionaries in China.

Shanghai is the gateway for trade with about 200 million Chinese people. It is the seat of the principal cotton, cigarette and match factories, flour mills, ship yards, foreign banks and trading companies. The total population is about 800,000. The international settlement there has existed for more than half a century. There is also a French concession and the Chinese city is divided into three parts. It is on the Whangpo river, about 11 miles above its junction with the Yangtze. The foreign powers, including the United States, maintain almost invariably by the way-side and village walls free from competition.

The weekly press of Canada has enjoyed a creditability if not spectacular history. These journals, covering as they do the small towns and rural communities, have become the intimate family reading matter of a large portion of Canadian people. A generation ago in both the weekly papers and small daily paper communities there were valiant battles between rival publications, but with the increase in production costs of the rivals almost invariably fell by the wayside and to-day most of the town dailies and village weeklies occupy their local fields free from competition.

There are in Canada today 111 daily newspapers, 93 tri-weekly papers, 30 semi-weekly, 35 monthly periodicals, 331 monthly periodicals and 27 quarterlies, or 1540 in all. Definite figures for all these types of publications are lacking prior to 1892, but in that year there were 96 of these, 6 tri-weeklies, 22 semi-weeklies, 653 weeklies, 30 semi-monthlies, and 217 monthlies.

The international settlement was established by the British in 1844 and extended to all foreigners. The land was set aside for foreign settlements and applications for leases were approved by the British Consul. In 1863 the British and Americans joined in electing a municipal council to govern the settlement, but now all foreigners are eligible to participate in the elections. Chinese are admitted to residence there to a limited extent, but cannot participate in the government. The Municipal Council fixes taxes and leases, and administers traffic, sanitation and building. It maintains a police force of 2000, composed principally of Sikhs under British officers, and the police also, a thoroughly equipped volunteer military guard composed of foreigners. The British have a majority in the Council.

In 1925 there were political disturbances in Shanghai in the Chinese quarter and the town was shelled by foreign gunboats and marines were landed. The United States also participated in the conflict.

In August, 1926, three British officers and four enlisted men were killed while attempting to capture a

"HOP HIKERS" NOT POPULAR WITH GUARDIANS OF THE LAW

Some days ago, at the convention of Northwest Sheriffs and Police, which includes ten northwestern states and the four western provinces of Canada, it was unanimously agreed that motorists should be warned against the practice of giving "lifts" to pedestrians along highways, a practice which in many cases enables law-breakers to more successfully evade capture, as was the case of the Gorilla Man," Earle Nelson.

The question is one already seriously considered by officials of automobile clubs. The Alberta Motor Association draws attention to the fact that not only does the practice of "hop hiking" militate against the apprehension of crime, but that motorists who indulge in the habit of giving automobile lifts to boys and girls a very measurable degree to the creation of a new national problem. The American Motorist, official publication of the American Automobile Association, has just completed a survey which shows that 70 per cent of the youthful down-and-owners who become a burden on charitable organizations in the large cities have arrived at destination via the "hop-hiking" trail.

"Hop-hikers" are not confined to boys alone," the bulletin states. "Almost as many girls find their way to the soup stands. Not only that but these children of both sexes leave home at a much earlier age than they would have done but for the ease with which they can secure rides. It's an easy road to panhandling, destitution and crime. The tide moving along this road is assuming alarming proportions and in the interest of the youth of the land, motorists should realize once and for all that the solution is squarely up to them."

HAS NO DETERRENT EFFECT

A committee examining the competition between railroads and motor trucks, has discovered that trucks have made but small inroads into the railroad's business, and that the road loss to the railroads was of the least remunerative to the roads.

For the immediate future this assures the belief that the railroads are doomed—that the motor truck has won the race and, conversely, the railroad has lost the race. It is agreed that the motor truck is best suited to certain kinds of traffic. Railroads in more congested areas, owing to this, have gone to the motor transportation business themselves, owing the railroad terminals for their new motor business. Neither business has hurt the other, if anything, both have profited.

HEART and NERVES Were So Bad COULDN'T DO HOUSEWORK

Mrs. E. Finch, 251 Silverbirch Ave., Toronto, Ont., writes: "After my third baby was born my heart and nerves were so bad I could do no housework, and was very ill indeed. I took a bad spell and everyone thought I was going to die. A friend asked me to try

Wiseman Gains Niche in the Temple of Fame

Sinks Golf Ball for Hole-in-One With Drive of 116 Yards, on Wetaskiwin Course

There comes one supreme moment in the life of every human being. It came to Lindbergh when he negotiated the New York to Paris flight; it came to Babe Ruth when he hung up a home run record that has stood for years; it came to Bobby Jones when he capped off three golf championships in one year; and it came to George E. Wiseman, C. P. express agent, of this city, last Friday. Any chest inflation which may be noticeable, or any extraordinary elevation of the top piece, is undoubtedly resultant of the historic occasion.

Mr. and Mrs. Wiseman were paying a visit to their golf links and incidentally taking the round, with a varied assortment of pellet pastures. Driving from the fifth tee, Mr. Wiseman was utterly unable to sight any trace of the little sphere, and, in despair, decided to follow the fortunes of Mrs. Wiseman. He visited the fifth hole, to pull the iron and pave the way for Mrs. Wiseman's shot—lo, and behold, the missing golf ball was discovered, nestling in the miniature well. The ambition of all golfers had been unconsciously accomplished, and great was the joy thereof. The hole which served for George the purpose of embellishing his name in the Hall of Fame was situated on the top of an elevation, and one hundred and sixteen yards from the tee.

This is the third hole-in-one that has been made on the present course. Fritz Kirstein was the proud boaster of one last year; McClure of Red Deer made one in a tournament this summer; and now the honors have come to Wetaskiwin for the third.

NEW NORWAY TRIMS MIRROR

New Norway, July 11—Four teams lined up in the senior baseball tournament here, Mirror, Ferintosh, New Norway and Camrose. Mirror and Camrose were drawn against each other with Mirror taking the winning score. In the succeeding game New Norway turned the sod over Ferintosh. These games put New Norway and Mirror in line for the final clash in the evening game, the former team winning 4 to 3.

BALL PLAYER KILLED

Marion, Ga., July 14—Pete Mann, third baseman of the Macon baseball team of the South Atlantic Association, was instantly killed Wednesday when he was struck over the heart by a pitched ball in a game with Ashville.

HARRY WILLS KNOCKED OUT

Brooklyn, N.Y., July 14—Paulino Uzunian, the Bounding Basque of the Pyrenees, knocked out Harry Wills, New Orleans negro, in the fourth round of their scheduled ten-round fight here Wednesday night.

Youth Generally is Winner
Speed contests go to the young George Sanders, 23, won this year's Indianapolis speedway 500-mile auto race. Charles A. Lindbergh, 25, flew across the Atlantic ocean in two and a half hours less than he had estimated for his flight. Gertrude Ederle, a young girl, as the first woman to swim the English channel, and George Young, 17, of Toronto, was the first to swim the Catalina channel.

There are two general types of winners: those who win on sheer daring, and make their victory the basis of later experience; and those who gain their experience first—and youth belongs to the first category. It wins on impulse. It wins because it has never had the experience of defeat. Those who continually cry out that modern life is imperiling youth might take heed of what young people are doing.

turn much amusement. On the first day there will be one game, at six in the evening, and on the two following days there will be games at 11 in the morning and 6 in the evening.

A first-class orchestra has been engaged to furnish music for the dancing pavilion, which boasts a brand new dancing floor, 33 by 60 feet, covered in a special compartment being erected for the orchestra. There will be dancing afternoon and evening, each day.

The management, which has affiliated with the Canadian Cowboys' Contest Managers' Association, are sparing neither time nor expense in making this a Stampede second to none. The spacious arena has been fenced in, and the four new corrals which have been erected are models of strength and convenience. Every provision is being made to protect the thousands of spectators who will doubtless be there, from accident, and Dame Nature has provided a grandstand that gives a commanding view of the arena and competitions.

KILL A CROW

Friends of bird life are already preparing to wage their annual campaign against the crow and the raven, being urged to awake from its apathy in this regard. It is pointed out that the crow is becoming more and more a menace to the bird life of this section of the province and, unless organized effort is directed toward the destruction of this enemy, our song birds will eventually be exterminated.

Conditions as they exist on the prairie today are exceptionally favorable to the crow, and enable him to clean up the nests of our feathered friends with remarkable thoroughness. It need only be pointed out that the scarcity of bluffs forces the birds to concentrate their nesting operations. Jim Crow locates in one of these bluffs, builds his own nest, and proceeds to dominate the situation. His own sharp eye ferrets out the nests of the little songsters and it takes but a few days for him to clean up the eggs of every nest in the vicinity.

HOT PIE SCALDS BOY AT WILCOX AND HE DIES

Regina, July 14.—As a result of shock and burns received when he upset a hot, freshly baked pie on his face Monday, Lyle Hanley, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. John Raymond Hanley of Wilcox, died in hospital here yesterday morning. The baby, two and one half years old, in some unknown manner, pulled a freshly baked pie which his mother had set at the window to cool, over on himself when he was running to meet his father. The hot juice and fruit from the pie burned and scalded his face.

INDIANS PRESENT GIFT

Calgary, July 13.—As a token of the esteem in which His Majesty is held by the Blackfoot Indian tribe in Alberta, his representative, Lieut.-Governor William Egbert, was presented with a hand-tooled tobacco pouch by Joe Calf Child, one of the minor chiefs of the tribe, immediately following the big parade Monday morning. Duck Chief, the head of the tribe, and White Headed Chief, together with three other chiefs, were present at the ceremony.

DR. CONYBEARE DEAD

Lethbridge, July 14.—Dr. C. F. P. Conybeare, president of the Alberta Law Society, died at his home here Wednesday morning in his 65th year.

He came to Lethbridge in 1886 and practiced law, being created Queen's Counsel in 1914. He was born in England and received his legal education in Winnipeg.

THE SPRUCE

When the Cree and Blackfoot made their truce They sat them down near a tree of spruce.

There on the Peace Hill's lovely crest They buried their hatchets, and said, "Oh rest!"

The spruce tree to itself had said, "I shall be here when these men are dead."

So it lorded it o'er the prairie grand, A sentinel guide in a peaceful land, And often in its deep shade green.

The pioneers' children happily played, The balm and poplar grew hardy, But the old spruce towered toward the sky.

Since childhood's days I knew that tree—
Twas just like a dear old friend to me.

Then I wandered back, but just to find By many friends I was left behind;

So I turned to the hill, my heart a load,—

And they'd cut down that tree to mend a road!

Even a needle to be useful must keep its eye open, and a pin must have a head.

PICTURESQUE WEST

Saturday, July 8. Chief Thunderchild, last of the Indian chiefs who signed the treaty with the crown in 1876, having sold over the land of the west to the British, died on Thunderchild River June 29, according to word received here. With his death there departed one of the most picturesque figures of the west.

The chief took office 49 years ago as a young man of 25. He signed the treaty at Standing Lake, Alta., after the Carlton and Battleford chiefs had signed at Fort Carlton. During the rebellion of 1885, Thunderchild resolutely maintained his peace with the crown, conducting his agricultural instruction, A. Sturmer, to safety at Battleford, and withdrawing his tribe to the north side of the river. He was the only chief to retain his uniform and medals after the rebellion. Some 14 or 15 years ago Chief Thunderchild sold his lands and improvements for a good price after three days of negotiations, and bought the present Thunderchild reserve for three dollars an acre.

The chief succumbed to pneumonia after six weeks' illness. Immediately before his death he and his wife embraced Christ, being baptized by Rev. Edward Ahonen, the only full-blooded Indian Anglican pastor in Canada.

The funeral took place on the evening of the day of his death.

The children, assembling at Plymton's hall, proceeded through the main thoroughfare, carrying flags furnished to them for the occasion. As they marched past Graham's Pharmacy, each child was given a ticket for ice cream, which, needless to say, was not refused by any of the children.

On the grounds a program of baseball, basketball, foot races and other athletic events was staged. In the baseball tournament three teams were entered: West Union, Leslie and Millet. The competition was opened with the game between West Union and Leslie. Leslie took West Union into camp to the tune of 22 to 3. The winners got away to an excellent start in the first frame when Woods crashed out a homer. In the second of the series Millet pushed 10 runs into second place for the prize money.

The results in detail will appear in next week's issue on the Millet page.
